Red High Risk Factors are improper practices or procedures identified as the most prevalent contributing factors of foodborne illness or injury. These items are prominent on the inspection report because maintaining compliance of these items is vital to preventing foodborne illness.

Examples of focus include: ill food worker policy, hand washing, bare hand contact with ready-to-eat foods, food temperatures; cold holding and hot holding, food safety knowledge, cross-contamination

Blue Low Risk Factors are preventative measures that include practices and procedures which effectively control the introduction of pathogens, chemicals, and physical objects into food. If these are not controlled, they could be contributing factors to foodborne illness.

Examples of focus include: food temperature control, food labeling and date marking, food and non-food contact surfaces clean, cleanliness inside and outside of establishment, plumbing, lighting, and sewage

The food safety rules and the local inspection program are designed to help ensure that food establishments are safe places to eat. The inspection reports are used as tools to measure compliance with the food safety rules, highlight areas to educate the operators, and guide corrective actions to help prevent food-borne illness. All food inspections are unscheduled with food service establishments.

Please be advised that the results of all inspections posted on this section of the site only describe what the Asotin County Health District Environmental Health Specialist observed at the time of the inspection, at the physical location of the establishment. Reports are not intended to guarantee the conditions of a food establishment at all times, nor are they meant to endorse any food establishment or products.
